Student election officials predict large turnout

By Bernie Williamson

This year's student elections should draw a "good turnout," according to Student Government Election Commissioner Terri Barna-Pitzl. Voting for the elections began on Monday and will continue today and Thursday. Polling locations will be set up in the Student Center, Library, HPER, and CBA buildings.

"The only way we can judge turnout is by the number of applicants" for the 32 Student Senate seats and the office of student president/regent, said Barna-Pitzl. Compared to last year, 22 more students have applied for positions on the ballot, she said.

Last year the voter turnout was "the second lowest" in five years, according to William Munson, advisor to student organizations. Munson said about 4 percent or a total of 630 students turned out to vote last fall.

He said the highest turnout for a student election was "slightly over 5 percent of the student population" but added that "based on national trends, it's not too unusual to have such a small percentage voting."

Munson said that while he has no basis for speculation about the eventual voter turnout, "there has been an increase over last year in the number of people running. It has also been my observation that some of the candidates have been campaigning more extensively" than last year. "There's tougher competition for votes," said Munson.

The three referenda on the ballot may also encourage students to vote, said Munson. Students are being given the opportunity to vote on whether to continue Fund A support of The Gateway, the campus speaker programs (SPO) and salaries paid to Student Government officers.

However, according to a sample ballot, a vote for or against any of the Fund A allocations "will not necessarily raise or lower student fees."

The referendum is required to be on the ballot each year by the NU Board of Regents, said Student Sen. Don Carlson. The regents mandated that "Fund A has to be voted on and has to be refundable," he said.

NSSA

Another referendum to be voted on concerns maintaining a UNO chapter of the Nebraska

State Student Association (NSSA). The UNO chapter, first approved in the 1981 student elections, is part of a statewide organization formed to lobby on behalf of student issues in the state legislature.

The NSSA referendum "has to pass by a simple majority of the students voting," said Carlson. If approved, a 50-cent fee would be added to the $43 full-time and $25 part-time student fees collected by UNO.

"I hope students get out and vote for it," said Carlson. "I think it's very valuable."

Last fall, students approved the NSSA referendum by a margin of 467 to 148, a 76 percent majority.

The third referendum on the ballot is about the possibility of a pre-registration system at UNO.

"The regents and UNO administrators have started looking into the possibility of a UNO pre-registration system," said Carlson. The referendum is a survey to indicate student support for such a system, he added.

At the Sept. 10 board meeting, Regent James Moylan of Omaha expressed concerns about long lines during UNO registration. "I think within the next year we ought to look at a pre-registration at UNO. We do it on the Lincoln campus," he said. Moylan is up for re-election this year.

"This year, having floating polling places and making them more accessible" may also help to improve voter turnout, according to Renee Duke, chief administrative officer for Student Government.

Polling places

Students wishing to vote may do so today at the octagon, near the games room on the first floor of the Student Center, from 8 a.m. till 4 p.m. There also will be polling locations on the first floor of Arts and Sciences Hall from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., by the entrance to the library from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., and in the HPER building from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The polling locations on Thursday will be the second floor of the Student Center and the second floor of the CBA Building from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Voting in the HPER building is from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"We're moving the polls around, trying to be where the most people are," said Barna-Pitzl. She said the HPER location, to be set up at 6 p.m. this evening, was arranged in order "to catch the intramural teams which play on Wednesday." She said the Thursday polling places at HPER will be open from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. in order to attract voters who attend classes in the building.

Everyone who enters the HPER building has to show their ID card to get in, so they may as well vote, said Barna-Pitzl.

She said there will be signs posted around campus pointing out the times and locations of the polling places.

In order to vote, students need to present a valid ID card to the poll workers on duty. Their name will then be crossed off a computer print-out, and a hole punched in their card to indicate that they have voted.

According to Barna-Pitzl, preliminary election results should be available sometime Thursday evening. If the vote counting takes longer than the Student Center is open, the results will be posted on the windows of the northwest doors on the second floor of the Student Center.

The results will not be final until the election commissioner's report is notarized and submitted to the speaker of the senate, the student president/regent and the Nebraska secretary of state to be certified as official.

Run-off election possible

Write-in candidates have a good chance of winning a seat in several Student Senate races, according to Terri Barna-Pitzl, Student Government election commissioner.

Barna-Pitzl said that Trice Jensen, candidate for the College of Home Economics seat, is running unopposed. Jay Barnes, candidate for the College of Fine Arts seat, and William York Hyde, candidate for one of two Graduate Class seats, are also running unopposed.

Last year, Student Sen. Guy Mockelman ran unopposed when he captured the University Division seat with 13 votes. Mockelman said there was a five-way tie between write-in candidates for the second seat.

There have also been a number of occasions in which no one has applied for several Student Government seats, said William Munson, advisor to student organizations. If no one applies, the position has to be filled by appointment, he said.

Munson said many Student Senate races have ended up in ties. He said that in the case of a tie, "the senate would ask both candidates to come in and have an open debate" during a senate meeting. Munson said the senate would then appoint one of the candidates to a senate seat.

While Student Senate candidates can be elected by a single majority, that is, by one or more votes over the next closest opponent, in past years, candidates for student president/regent have had to win with 51 percent of the vote.

"This frequently resulted in run-off elections between the two top vote getters," said former Medical Center Student President/Regent Michael Schmidt in a Gateway article published in 1981.

Schmidt said run-off elections were "costly, time-demanding and discrediting to the election process."

In order to alleviate the frequency of run-offs, in 1981 a proposal was approved by the NU Board of Regents that allows student president/regents to win by a 10 percent majority.

In the event that no candidate achieves a 10 percent advantage, a run-off will be held.

Another factor affecting the results of a student election is whether any of the candidates feel election rules have been violated. Munson said that if a candidate wishes to lodge a complaint, he may do so within 96 hours after the closing of the polls, by notifying the UNO Student Court in writing.

The preliminary results of the election should be available sometime Thursday evening. Munson said if the counting process continues after 10 p.m., when the Student Center is locked up for the night, election results will be posted on the windows of the northwest doors on the second floor.

Reagan's Omaha pep rally mixes policy with politics

This article includes opinions of the author.

By Steve Penn

President Reagan rolled into River City last week to endorse a few candidates, sign a gasoline bill, and give another one of his recovery speeches.

The Omaha visit was yet another leg of the political endorsement trail he's been blazing across the country. The next day he was in Washington, probably with nary a memory of the Midwest.

The president spoke for 27 minutes (I counted them) to a passive, but supportive crowd at the Civic Auditorium last Thursday. The topics of his address, naturally, covered the economy, transportation (Union Pacific played a big part in the Omaha rally) and, of course, agriculture.

The president's address was preceded by speeches from Nebraska Congressional Representatives Hal Daub, Doug Bereuter and Senate candidate James Keck. These were the people, along with Gov. Charles Thone, who were the recipients of the president's endorsements.

The gist of what each candidate had to say could best be summed up by one of Bereuter's comments: "We need a Republican team."

The auditorium was indeed a picture of Republican support with "Omaha Loves Reagan" banners and countless other political signs, posters and stickers hanging from the rafters and walls.

Jeff Miller

Campaign trail President Reagan made a brief visit to Omaha last week to endorse Republican candidates.

Although the auditorium was packed, it is interesting to note that, according to a White House aide, 18,000 tickets were distributed for an event held in a place that was set up to hold only 9,000. Nevertheless, there were a lot of Republicans in the arena.

With so many members of the Grand Old Party in one place, one would think the air would be thick with wild enthusiasm. This was not the case.

In fact, the crowd at one point had to be egged on by the numerous cheerleaders in attendance to chant "Ray-gun, Ray-gun." Even the moderator of the event was being urged on from the wings to keep it up by John Huntsman, a key member of the White House advance team.

The atmosphere seemed at once excited and dull. It should have been exciting, but the crowd was dull. As for the problem of keeping the crowd chanting, one member of the press corps was heard to remark, "talk about artificial enthusiasm."

However, after a moderately successful attempt to get the crowd up for the president's entrance, the UNO Marching Band (under the direction of James Saker, UNO assistant professor of music) finally broke into the first notes of "Hail to the Chief."

Concurrently, a swarm of Secret Service agents flooded the wings as Reagan rounded the corner to the stage entrance.

Having sighted the president, the crowd broke into heavy applause as Reagan, accompanied by Thone, made his way to his seat behind the presidential podium.

Thone spoke before the president and opened with, "Nebraska is indeed Reagan country," which, of course, elicited the expected applause.

Thone also did some endorsing of his own.

Candidates vie for Student Government seats

Student President/Regent (1 seat)

Bill Harvey, 19, sophomore, College of Business Administration, undeclared major.

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I want to see the students of UNO have a greater voice in decisions which are made about their university. I believe that I could be that kind of president."

ISSUES: Parking, admissions standards, and parity with UNL.

QUALIFICATIONS: "I am involved in many different departments and programs throughout the university. I hope that my experience in the College of Business, the music department, the honors program, and the university tour program would help me to carry out my duties as student president."

Ray A. Mandery, 33, College of Continuing Studies, business.

REASON FOR RUNNING: "I see a need for someone that is dedicated and willing to work for the benefit of all UNO students. I also feel that I will be able to gain the respect of the regents and work with them to accomplish mutual goals for the betterment of students and student services."

ISSUES: "First, the lack of parity between UNO and UNL, such as UNO receiving only 25 percent of scholarship money when we should get 41 percent, and the $3,000 discrepancy in full professors' salaries. Other issues include the mishandling of Fund A money in the past by Student Government agencies, and the lack of input students have on the use of Fund B money."

QUALIFICATIONS: On-campus: Former chairman, Budget Committee; member, Executive, Rules, and Appointment Committees; member, Student Activities Budget Commission; member UNO 75th Anniversary Committee; and member, UNO Computer Usage Committee. REASON FOR RUNNING: "To continue the positive accomplishments of the present administration. I'm a graduate student at night so I'll be available through the day. I'd like to promote more parity between UNO and UNL, and extirpate student apathy on this campus."

ISSUES: Parking, selective admissions (opposed), and gaining the administration's respect for every UNO student.

Sixty-one UNO students have filed for the offices of student president/regent and 32 seats on the Student Senate.

Representation in the Student Government is broken down as follows: One candidate will be elected to the office of student president/regent; the winner will serve in a non-voting capacity on the NU Board of Regents.

In addition, the 32 seats on the senate are divided into two categories: representation by college and class standing.

Representation by college is based on the number of students enrolled in that college; for example, the College of Arts and Sciences will elect four representatives, the College of Fine Arts one.

Representation by class is not based on a numerical figure; each class will elect two representatives.

The views expressed on this page were obtained by biographical sheets filled out by the candidates when they filed. Of the 61 students who filed, four did not complete a biographical sheet. The Gateway was unable to contact these individuals; nonetheless, their candidacies are duly noted in the text.

Elections cursed?

Student candidates lack depth, concern

Perhaps it's because it always happens near Halloween. It must be a curse. That seems to be the only plausible explanation why student elections don't work at UNO.

While it is unfair to criticize those who are sincerely interested in doing something about the problems at this university, there is a definite sense of student apathy that permeates the atmosphere at UNO.

The student elections at UNO don't work because of this apathy. How can you have a representative body to do the bidding of a student body that doesn't know what it wants? There really is no student body as a whole at this university and it is a delusion to believe there is.

This is not to discredit the many fine students to which this university caters. There are a number of students at this university who strive to the best of their ability to achieve their goals.

Many of these students care about the quality of education they receive and how their money is spent. The plain fact of the matter is that they, being non-traditional students, are often too busy working to put themselves through school to worry about participating in Student Government affairs.

The average UNO student is too concerned about paying the rent, taking care of children or meeting other responsibilities. Unfortunately, this leaves probably two groups left to fill the vacancies in Student Government; those who are very dedicated to the amelioration of the student conditions on campus, and those who are either too immature or to inexperienced to effectively deal with the issues that confront members of Student Government.

How many of you can honestly say, right now, that you know who you will vote for in the student elections? Do you know their names? Do you know what they stand for?

It's true that it is incumbent upon us to find out who believes what and why in any election, but when we have no information on which to base these decisions, the effort becomes futile.

The lack of campaigning and the less than efficient manner in which student elections have been run this year have resulted in another bad election. No one knows who to vote for, and one of the reasons is that there was virtually no campaigning, and hardly any time in which to do it.

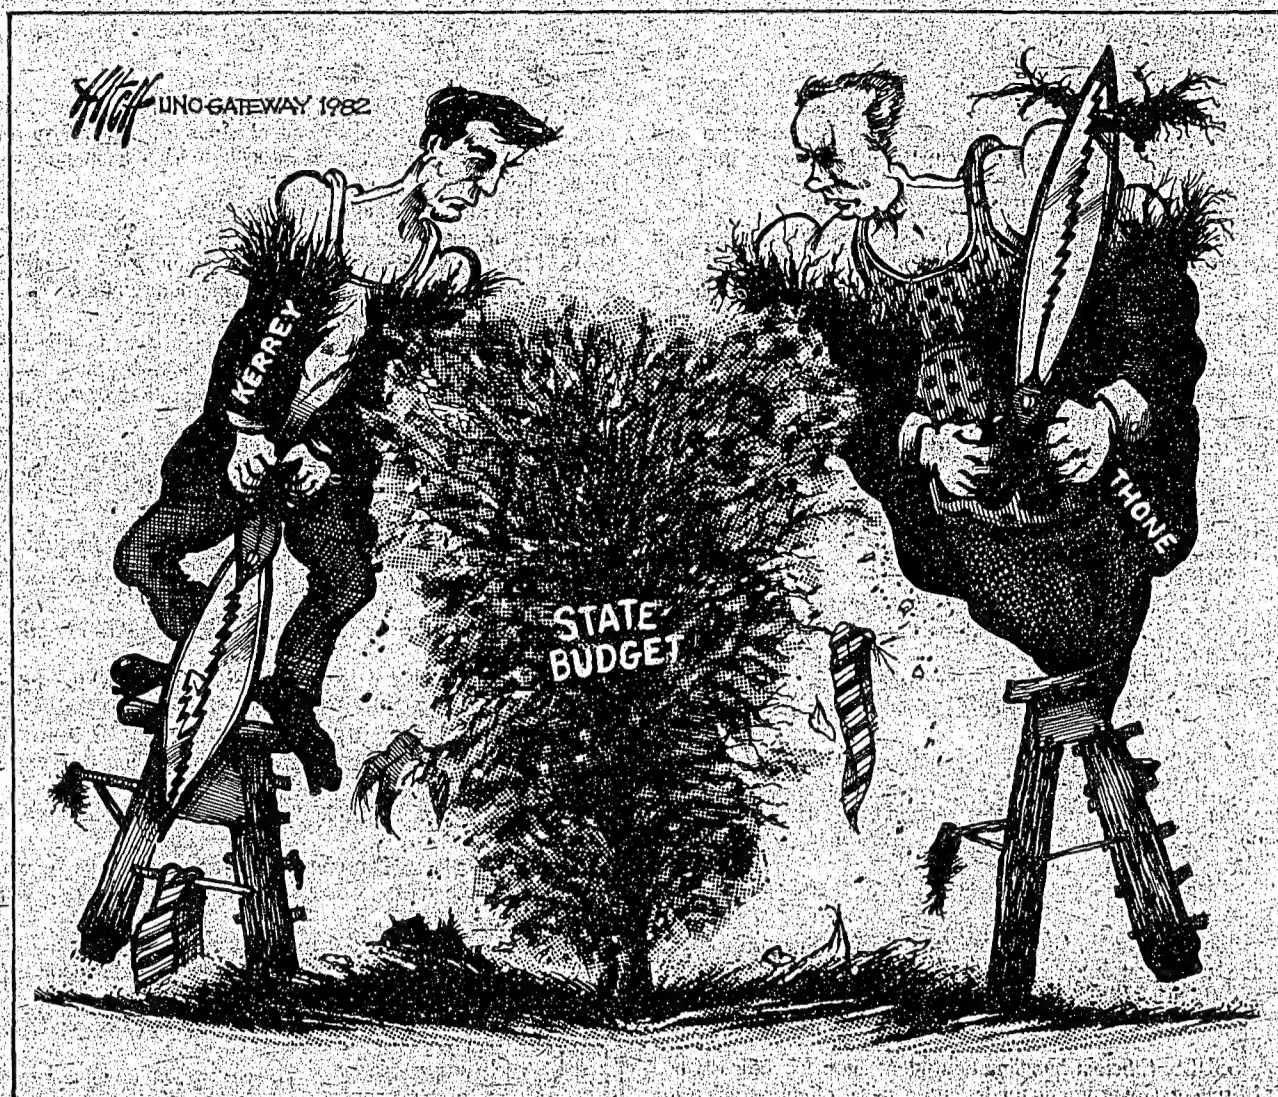

We can't make intelligent decisions when we are not armed with the necessary information.

This year, The Gateway distributed biographical sheets in an effort to help solve this problem. The results were shocking, to say the least.

The lack of depth, intelligence and sincere concern displayed in the answers to simple questions is cause for alarm. One student replied that he was running to "make megabucks." This is an intelligent student? For one thing, this poor cretin should know that student senators are not recompensed for their service.

This, as one can see by examining the responses to our questionnaire, is not atypical. We received many similar responses.

We can only hope that Student Government, by some miracle, gets its act together and follows its own rules, and that some day UNO student elections will be something meaningful instead of the farce they now are.

To the Editor:

The Atherton cartoon which appeared in the Oct. 15 issue of the Gateway was an affront to the sensibilities of both men and women. You and your staff obviously do not equate quality with integrity.

To the Editor:

I am seriously concerned about the Student Senate elections. It has come to my attention that a number of people who were under investigation by the Student Senate just a few short days ago are now running for the Student Senate. I cannot believe that the former director of HSO, James McMahon, and his handmaidens, Bruce Wilson, Michael Simpkins, John Schwertly, Debra Loeffler and Mike Parkinson have the audacity to run for such offices.

This is just another example of how a system can be abused by a few individuals. I cannot remember how many times McMahon was reprimanded as the director of HSO. Add to that the fact that he and his assistant, Bruce Wilson, did not cooperate with the senate in its investigation, and yet, they now ask the student body to vote for them. If these individuals are elected to the senate, then whatever happens to Student Government is exactly what it deserves.

I, for one, am not going to stand by and be witness to such a travesty, and the ruination of democracy. I will not vote for these people, and ask that no one else does either.

Eric D. Lindner

To the Editor:

I was extremely surprised to see Jim McMahon's name listed among those who filed a petition for a Student Senate seat. I am under the impression that he misused student fees. How could he possibly think that he would be an adequate representative for the students on this campus?

I also recognized some other names that were linked to him during the recent scandal; Bruce Wilson, who was removed as interim director of HSO; John Schwertly, whose name was one listed as a director of Access America; and Mike Simpkins, who was also listed as a director of Access America.

As far as I can tell, McMahon organized Access America in July of 1982, and then signed a contract on behalf of HSO with Access America.

I personally will not vote for any of these people and I urge all other students not to vote for them either!

Referring to Hitch, (Oct. 22), time will sure tell who is 100 percent behind Pastor Silven. Hitch's cartoon sure let me know who is 100 percent behind his work.

Fear and Loathing in Omaha

heaping accolades upon Keck, saying "we need to regain the (senate) seat Roman Hruska once held with such distinction."

After about seven minutes, Thone turned the rally over to the president, who strode to the podium, shook hands with Thone, and turned to the crowd.

"It's great to be back in Nebraska," he said. Of course. The president then praised Thone for maintaining the "bedrock values" of Nebraska and for standing with Nebraskans "through sun and storm." He defended both his and Thone's budget cuts, saying, "The right way to change is to reduce government spending."

Reagan said that critics who say Thone wants to raise taxes "are lying in their teeth. He had some hard decisions to make and he made them."

The president said that even though his critics say America is "on its knees," that's a heck of a lot better than two years ago when it was flat on its back.

The president then cited "five critical problems" facing the country: runaway spending, runaway taxation, double-digit inflation, record interest rates, and high unemployment. He added that he has made "solid progress" on four, and that "in anybody's league, four out of five ain't bad."

The president then turned his attention to agricultural concerns. In an impassioned statement, Reagan once more denounced the Soviet grain embargo and promised to "provide assurances of reliable delivery" for Nebraska farmers' goods.

With questions obviously orchestrated to elicit pre-planned responses, the president turned on his cheerleader charm for the Omaha crowd. After asking questions like "Do you want more taxes?" ("No.") and "Is there a better way?" ("Yes."), the president, apparently assuming the role of a teacher, told the crowd "You get an A-plus."

Perhaps the highlight of the president's address came toward the end of his speech.

A loud report, reminiscent of a gunshot, echoed through the auditorium. While Secret Service agents snapped to, without losing a beat the president quipped, "Missed me," which drew tumultuous laughter from the surprised crowd. The sound had come from a paper cup stomped on in the hallway.

The rally ended with a few final words from the president and the usual closing wave and smile.

Amid heavy applause and whistling, Reagan exited the arena. He left behind an entourage to pick up the pieces, roll up the wires and pack it all away for the next show, much in the same manner as when a rock band takes the final curtain call and heads for the tour bus. The only difference was that this one was on the taxpayers, and rock bands don't usually draw vocal throngs of protestors outside the arena.

Non-traditional students balance school, other demands

By Nancy Jasa

Have you ever played the same game for 10 years to wake up and find that the rules have been changed?

Many non-traditional students feel that way. Marjorie Wikoff is concerned with the problems of these students.

Wikoff, freshman counselor in the College of Arts and Sciences at UNO, said there is a lot of disagreement about the definition of a non-traditional student. Anyone who does not fit the definition of a 18- to 22-year-old middle-class student can be considered a non-traditional student, she said.

Working mainly with older students, Wikoff said their greatest problem is anxiety. "They think they need to be better than the traditional student and better than they were years ago," said Wikoff.

Non-traditional students have a lot of other demands besides school. Wikoff said they face pressure from full-time jobs, children, spouses, and a myriad of financial problems.

She said that many of these students return to school after a number of years in the work force for one of two reasons.

Career or job-oriented reasons is why a high number of women return to school, said Wikoff.

Many women have never had a job, she added.

Men generally return due to dead-end jobs, being laid off, or because they are retired from military service, she said.

Returning to school can give a person self-fulfillment. Many times older persons return because they want something interesting and challenging, according to Wikoff.

Other reasons include the economy.

The non-traditional student may feel some alienation. "They walk across campus looking for someone that looks familiar," said Wikoff.

"An uneducated woman in the job force, whether it was 10 years ago or today, is at a disadvantage. I want the degree to get the clout."

She spoke of one woman who heard someone call her name. The woman was very excited, said Wikoff, that someone remembered her.

"Older students almost without exception are delighted with the way traditional students accept them," said Wikoff.

It's difficult to make friends, she said, when everyone comes to classes, goes to their jobs, and has very little involvement on campus. "There's nothing to force students together."

Some non-traditional students said they have had trouble adjusting to college life. Most said they knew why they had returned to school, but had trouble choosing a major.

Joan Varga has been out of school for seven years. "An uneducated woman in the job force, whether it was 10 years ago or today, is at a disadvantage," said Varga. "I want the degree to get the clout."

She said the majority of her stress, since returning to school, is that she no longer has any free time. Other problem areas include the lack of money and regaining study habits.

One of the advantages is the ability to relate to professors who are often her own age, said Varga. "I still have a certain amount of respect, but if he's not doing his job, I won't fail to say so," she added.

Steve Keeran said he doesn't feel any pressure from younger students. It has been 11 years since Keeran has been in school.

He said he returned to school so he can change careers due to limited job mobility. "The UNO campus is more of a non-traditional type of school in comparison with dormitory campuses," said Keeran. The students can relate with each other, he said, because so many of them are working.

"I'm used to doing things at my leisure," said Keeran. "I'm not used to the strict discipline as far as studying goes."

"I've felt real slighted by the financial aid system," he said. "I am trying to support myself and trying to get aid for school. They say I'm making too much money."

Jim Powers returned to school after six years in the service. He said that the majority of his stress comes from school meaning more to him now than when he was in high school.

His perspective is different because "I'm trying to prove something to myself."

Carol Price has been in and out of school since 1974. She has twin daughters at home aged three.

Price said her main priority is her children, not school. "My stress is due to the extra demands on my time," she added.

"I don't get involved in any school activities and in that way I feel more removed from the school spirit," said Price.

There is a program designed for non-traditional students. (continued on page 7)

'Commercial space exploration should be encouraged'

By Karen Nelson

A project scientist from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory told a group of physics students that the best reason to get involved in space exploration is to take advantage of raw materials and other resources.

Warren James spoke at last weekend's Zone 9 Conference of the Society of Physics Students at UNO. The conference, co-sponsored by the UNO and Creighton University chapters of the Society of Physics Students, focused on expectations for industrialization and development in the space industry.

James, who spoke Saturday afternoon on "The Next Phase of Space Travel-Industrialization," said that failing to explore space for resources would result in condemning future generations to live in "misery unheard of."

"Raw materials, not canned milk, will solve the problems of the Third World." Those raw materials, said James, will come from mining and manufacturing done in space.

According to James, only 6 percent of the world's population uses most of the resources. "If only one world is not enough to support the population, only a fool would restrict himself to one world."

"The view that the Earth is the home of the human race is a narrow one. Ultimately, 'home' is the entire universe."

Raw materials

The search for raw materials in space will probably center on metals and minerals such as silicates and permafrost. Permafrost is especially important because it's a sign that there is some oxygen available, he said.

There has been no sign of metals or carbon on the moon, according to James, but some minerals have been found. Carbon may be found on some asteroids, while other asteroids have been found to be all metal.

"No one has everything, but every one has something," James said. "There is interesting and useful stuff out there; we just don't know where to find it."

The amount of raw materials in the solar system is not unlimited, James said. "There's only enough to last us for the next three or four thousand years. By that time, humans may have achieved access to other star systems, or there may be different technology."

Advantages

Space exploration is useful, not only because of the resources available on asteroids, the moon and other planets, but because some types of commercial processing may eventually be done better and more economically in space, said James.

Zero gravity may be one advantage. According to James, the lack of gravity in space can be useful in ensuring the purity of pharmaceutical drugs, preventing the separation of metals used in creating alloys, and making it possible to develop new products such as metal foam.

Metal foam, which is made by injecting water or gas into liquified metal, is lightweight but strong. Gravity usually breaks down the foam structure, said James, so it is expensive to make. Producing metal foam in space would be easier and less expensive.

Less expensive solar energy may also be a possibility. Because there is no interference from the weather and no interference with night and day in space, solar energy can be collected easily and continuously, he said.

Most present commercial space activity centers on satellites. James called the communications industry the first "paying customers" of space exploration, although he said satellites are also used for finding minerals on the Earth's surface, searching for water, monitoring areas vulnerable to earthquakes, and monitoring the atmosphere for pollution and changes in weather.

One of the newest uses for satellites is for agriculture. "It's now possible to distinguish between healthy and sick vegetation before the naked eye can. It's possible to use a monitoring device and walk among the fields and do it," said James.

"Doing it from the air is faster; it's still faster and cheaper to do it from space. Monitoring the fields allows for more productivity and cuts down on the use of pesticides."

One problem with satellites is that space in the geostationary orbit — an orbit 22,000 miles above the equator — is running out. Solutions such as lengthening the antennae of the satellites and creating satellites which can serve more than one function are being worked on, James said.

As long as there are commercial reasons to go into space, exploration should be encouraged, he said.

"No one will go into space if they can't make a buck," said James. "It's nice to think there are all these humanistic reasons for going into space, but it usually doesn't happen that way. The possibility of making a profit is the only way to ensure that we get into space and stay in space."

Remodeled Alumni House opens doors to university

Yes, there is life after graduation. The UNO Alumni Association is a self-supporting, nonprofit corporation dedicated to the advancement of the university and to providing activities and services to alumni, according to Dan Devere, assistant director of the Alumni House. Between 8,000 to 10,000 persons take advantage of the facilities the house offers each year.

The alumni house is a fairly new home for the Alumni Association. A fund-raising drive began in March of 1980 with a goal of $450,000 and ended with a total of $564,860 in cash and pledges. Devere said the funds were used for a mortgage payment, remodeling and landscaping, and a reserve fund to finance future maintenance and utilities.

In August of 1981, the final touches of the remodeling of the interior of the home were completed.

Remodeling of the house, located on the west side of UNO at 6705 Dodge St., included transforming a three-car garage into a clubroom. What was once a driveway is now the entrance to the home. There also is a large reception parlor with a connecting kitchen. A patio in the backyard can be used for various events.

According to Devere, about one and one-quarter acres of lawn is currently enclosed by a fence. A concrete parking lot has been replaced by a curved walkway lined with trees, shrubs and grass at the entrance of the house.

University-related functions may be held at the Alumni House. Because it is a nonprofit organization and privately owned, alcohol may be served. Students, faculty, staff and alumni may use the house. Devere said there is a small fee charged and food may be catered by UNO or another service.

The Alumni Association also has conference rooms available. Office space and storage takes up the second and third floors and the basement.

Devere said the association awards 60 scholarships each year. The money is donated by alumni and restrictions vary according to what the donor specifies.

Alumni House Facilities include a clubroom, a reception parlor, a patio, and a sunroom, which is shown here.

Third World conference meets

"Changing Patterns in the Global Community" is the theme of the Fifth National Conference on the Third World meeting at the Red Lion Inn, 1616 Dodge St.

The conference, which starts today and runs through Saturday, is sponsored by UNO's International Studies and Programs division, the black studies department, the College of Arts and Sciences, and the College of Continuing Studies.

Participants in the conference will include people from the United States, Canada and Nigeria. Topics to be addressed include terrorism, energy, human rights, agriculture, economy, religion, population, women, and the obligations of advanced countries to the Third World.

Tomorrow, participants in the conference will join the Conference on International Agribusiness at the Peter Kiewit Conference Center, 1313 Farnam St., at 11 a.m. The two groups will hear President Reagan discuss international agriculture trade via an international satellite telecast.

After Reagan's speech, participants in the Omaha conferences will have a chance to talk with leaders of Caribbean countries via a special two-way hookup from Miami.

Cost of the conference is $35 for the public, $7 for full-time students who do not attend UNO, and free for UNO students, faculty and staff.

Women & ads

"Killing Us Softly," a film portraying advertising's image of women, will be shown tomorrow from 12:10 to 1 p.m. at the Peter Kiewit Conference Center, 1313 Farnam St.

The film looks at how women are shown negatively in magazine ads, newspapers, album covers and store windows.

The film, sponsored by the College of Continuing Studies, is free.

tional students, said Wikoff. A New Start class began in 1975 for those students returning to school after three years.

Wikoff said the class helps build up the students' skills and self-confidence.

The class reviews how to read a text, take tests, use the library, structure time, and how to cope with stress, said Wikoff.

"The response has been positive for people who have been through the course," she said. The problem has been letting students know it is available.

The class is offered during the day and has one section at night. Wikoff said a lunch-hour section of the class will be taught at the Peter Kiewit Conference Center next semester.

There is also a New Start Support Group, she said, that meets once a week to talk about the concerns of the returning student.

Anyone who is interested in the New Start Program or has questions, should contact Wikoff at 554-2458.

Lousy first quarter triggers Bison stampede

UNO rally fails to overcome North Dakota St.

By Roger Hamer

The UNO Mavericks gave Division II's second-ranked football team a scare Saturday night before costly mistakes and injuries coalesced in a 35-16 loss to North Dakota State. UNO played one of its better games of the season, but for only about half of the game.

A horrendous first quarter, in which the Mav offense could not get untracked against a tough Bison defense, and a fourth quarter that found UNO playing catch-up resulted in the wide margin of victory. During the second and third quarters, however, the Mavs played like they were one of the better Division II teams in the country.

Yet, if a team plays its best for only 30 minutes, they lose games. The loss dropped UNO to 3-5 overall and 1-4 in the North Central Conference.

Smash UNO fullback Larry Barnett (5) runs a sweep for six yards as North Dakota State cornerback Barry Sorensen prepares to make the tackle.

The difference in the game can be attributed to lapses in the UNO kicking game, injuries, and illness.

Several players were sick with the flu. On the sick list was defensive tackle John Walker, who had a temperature of 103 degrees at game time. Head coach Sandy Buda said Walker was used sparingly during the second and third quarters. "Jerry Skow was also slowed by the flu, but he was able to play a lot," Buda said.

Another key player that was sidelined was linebacker Tim Carlson, who suffered a shoulder injury in the third quarter. Carlson did not return to action.

"It was a combination of things that crept up on us," Buda said. "We had a skeleton crew out there against a pretty good North Dakota State offense."

Injuries and illness aside, UNO lost this game because of errors in its kicking game. "We made too many mistakes," Buda said. "The kicking game killed us."

Three major mistakes (two of which occurred during punts) opened the door for the Bison to build a commanding 21-0 lead early in the second quarter before a crowd of 5,800 at Al Caniglia Field.

A 23-yard punt return by the Bison's Jeff Willis set up a 37-yard scoring drive. North Dakota State quarterback Mark Nellermoe led the Bison to the touchdown in just six plays. The play that set up the touchdown was a 14-yard pass from Nellermoe to receiver Doug Nutton. Junior running back Jeff Willis scored on a one-yard run.

UNO's kicking game failed again when Mark King fumbled a North Dakota State punt at the UNO 25-yard line. Nellermoe later scored on an eight-yard run giving the Bison a 14-0 lead.

North Dakota State proved why they lead the NCC in total offense by driving 71 yards in seven plays for a 21-0 advantage. The big play was a 37-yard pass interference penalty against UNO cornerback Dave Thoreson at the UNO 32. Nellermoe and Willis ran an option play to the right that gained 15 yards. Nellermoe scored from one yard out three plays later.

During its first five possessions, UNO was unable to pick up a first down. The offense went 22 minutes without a first down.

The Mavs finally got something going midway through the second quarter. Mav quarterback Randy Naran directed an 11-play, 71-yard touchdown drive to cut the Bison lead to 21-7.

Naran twice hit receiver Greg Havelka for big gains. On second and nine from the UNO 25-yard line, Naran found Havelka along the sidelines for a 25-yard pass completion, giving the Mavs their first first down of the game.

Sophomore running back Bill Gillman broke a draw play up the middle for 18 yards. On the

Mavericks aim to salvage season in next three weeks

This article includes opinions of the author.

By Eddie Vinovskis

A familiar story was once more re-enacted last Saturday night as the UNO Mavericks dropped a 35-16 decision to No. 2-ranked North Dakota State. The wide margin masked the fact that the teams were statistically even. But as has been the pattern all season long, crucial mistakes brought about the Mavs' downfall.

After falling behind 21-0 the game had all the earmarks of turning into a rout. But UNO battled back to within 21-16 at one point, throwing a scare into the unbeaten Bison.

Defensive tackle Jerry Skow, slowed by a case of the flu, said UNO didn't think about quitting when they fell behind. "We felt we could come back if we just cut out our mistakes," he said.

North Dakota State's offense was called for several delay of game penalties. Skow said this was due to the defense stunting a lot and shifting around at the last moment.

Skow said he felt the Bison were better than the Drake Bulldogs, a team the Mavs upset 27-17 the previous week. "They had a better offensive line than Drake," he said. "But the main thing is that they're winners. They somehow get the job done."

UNO sorely missed the full services of the other starting defensive tackle, John Walker. He spent most of the game on the sidelines, suffering from the flu.

"I had a temperature of 103 degrees before the game and it's probably higher now," Walker said after the game. "It (the flu) hit me yesterday and I was in the game for only about 10 to 15 plays."

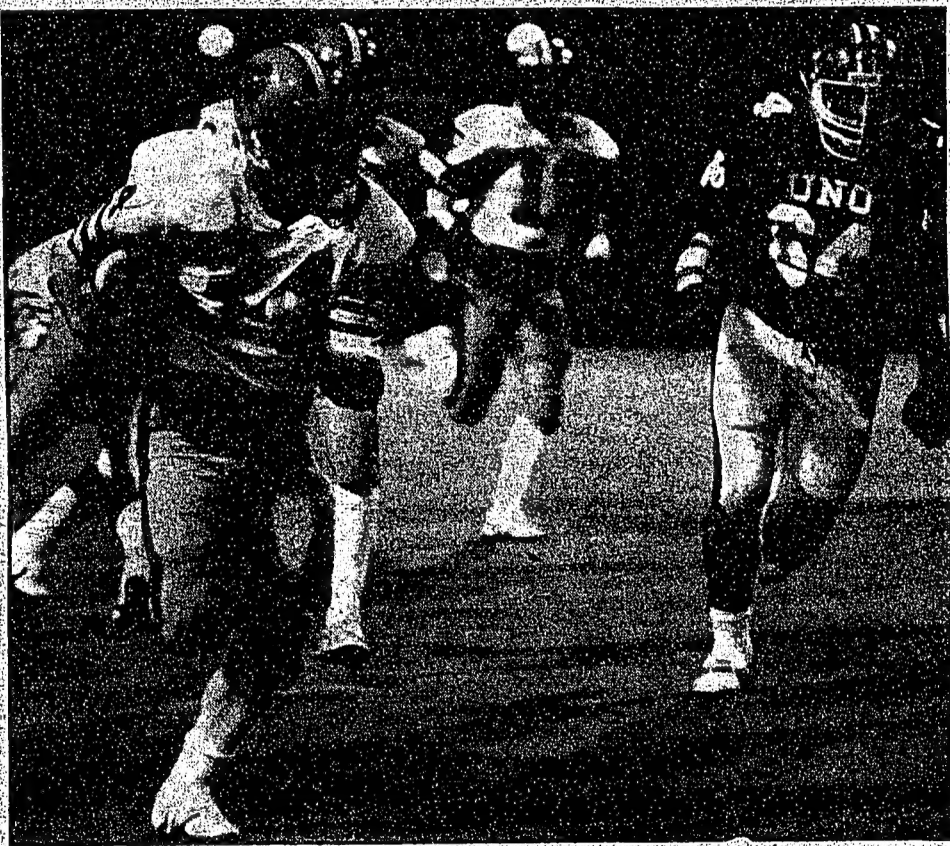

Walker was a picture of dejection as he sat by himself on a bench in the lockerroom. It wasn't just his ill health that had brought him down. "Losing doesn't feel too good either," he said.

Soucie sacks Nellermoe

UNO defensive end Ron Soucie had an eventful night, participating in eight tackles, intercepting a pass and dropping Bison quarterback Mark Nellermoe for a 10-yard loss on a third down passing situation in the first quarter.

On the Nellermoe sack, Soucie said the Mavs were in a blitz. "Both ends were coming and I was left wide open, just getting to the quart-

Nabbed... North Dakota State's Tom Shockman picked off a Randy Naran pass and returned it 35 yards in the fourth quarter. UNO's Carroll Allbery (64) and Bison Doug Hushka (12) trail the play.

Bison quarterback adjusts to defense by 'mixing it up'

North Dakota State, behind quarterback Mark Nellermoe, won a 35-16 decision over UNO Saturday night at Al Caniglia Field, assuring itself of at least a tie for the North Central Conference championship.

The Bison, 6-0 in the NCC and owners of a 17-game winning streak in the conference, capitalized on four UNO turnovers and recovered a fumbled punt in the end zone for a touchdown. North Dakota State scored on three of the UNO turnovers.

Bison head coach Don Morton praised UNO's defense and said he had expected a tough game. "Our players could see on the game films that they have some good players, especially on defense," said Morton.

A solid UNO defensive line forced Nellermoe into passing early in the game. "We knew we'd have to pass more than we like to," Nellermoe said. "Unlike most of the teams in the NCC, North Dakota State retains a strong running game, using the pass to keep opponents off balance."

Nellermoe hit 10 of 23 passes for 144 yards. Five of those completions went to freshman receiver Stacy Robinson for 70 yards. Robinson, who was described by Morton as a "world-class sprinter," said the UNO defensive backs gave him "too much of a cushion" after he beat them on a couple of fly patterns. Most of Robinson's receptions came on slant-ins and short hook patterns.

According to Nellermoe, the Bison passing attack early in the game softened up the UNO defense for the second half. "We mixed it up pretty well in the second half between the pass and run," the senior quarterback said. This enabled North Dakota State's offense to keep the UNO defense guessing throughout much of the second half.

Nellermoe ranked seventh in the NCC in rushing a year ago, and carried the ball 13 times Saturday night for only 38 yards. However, he scored two first half touchdowns on a one-yard run and an eight-yard scamper.

The UNO defensive line held North Dakota State to an average of 3.6 yards per carry despite the absence of senior defensive tackle John Walker, who had the flu. He played sparingly.

Walker had a 103 degree temperature at game time.

North Dakota State can win the conference title next week when the team travels to Northern Colorado. Northern Colorado can keep its slim title hopes alive with a win over North Dakota State next Saturday.

Surprise... UNO defensive end Ron Soucie returns an interception 11 yards, setting up a Mav field goal that cut North Dakota State's lead to 21-10.

next play, Naran and Havelka again teamed up for an 18-yard pick-up to the North Dakota State 15. Naran scored on a one-yard run six plays later.

The UNO defense helped set up a field goal as the first half ended. Defensive end Ron Soucie picked off a Nellermoe pass at the UNO 25-yard line and returned it 11 yards. Naran, who hit on 15 of 28 passes for 210 yards, led the Mavs downfield with the help of a 30-yard completion to tight end Kevin Munro and a 14-yarder to Don McKee.

UNO kicker Mark Pettit nailed a 38-yard field goal with two seconds left in the half.

"I was proud of the way our players came back after being down 21-0," Buda said. "It would have been easy for them to just give up."

North Dakota State could not alter the momentum UNO had gained in the second quarter. On its second possession in the third quarter, UNO scored on a six-play, 58-yard drive. Naran passed to tight end Joe Mancuso on a delay pattern over the middle for 14 yards. Freshman halfback Mark Gurley scooted 28 yards on an off-tackle play, and Havelka made a diving one-handed catch along the sidelines for 19 yards.

From the North Dakota State five-yard line, Gurley ran a sweep, bowled over two Bison defenders and twisted into the end zone. UNO, trailing 21-16, went for two points, but a Naran pass was batted down in the end zone.

"We put the air back in the ball," Buda said of the 16-point outburst against the Bison. "We didn't make any changes in our offense. We just started hitting some passes and that opened up the running game."

North Dakota State took the air out of the ball and stole the momentum by grinding out an eight-play, 60-yard touchdown to jump the score to 28-16.

Nellermoe ran an option to the right for six yards. Bison running back Hank Klos blasted through the middle for six more, than Dan Harris went off tackle for nine yards. Harris ran off-tackle again two plays later from the UNO 37-yard line and was finally stopped at the UNO seven. Klos carried three times, the final a one-yard touchdown run.

Once again the UNO kicking game disintegrated and gave North Dakota State a free touchdown. A fumbled punt in the end zone was recovered by North Dakota State's Scott Dahl for the final 35-16 margin.

Surprisingly, UNO outgained North Dakota State in total offense. UNO had 344 yards compared to the Bison's 317. The two teams were equal in almost all statistical categories, yet the mistakes in the May kicking game were too much to overcome.

Buda said he was very surprised at the offensive production of both teams. "The strength of both teams lie in their defenses," he said. "Either the defenses didn't play very good, or the offenses were very good."

By assuring at least a tie for the NCC title, North Dakota State extended its winning streak in the NCC to 17 games.

Sport Notes

Don Benning, who coached the 1970 UNO wrestling team to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship, is the newest member of the UNO Hall of Fame.

Benning is credited with establishing a strong wrestling program at UNO. He took over from the late Al Caniglia in 1963 and posted a 87-24-4 record in eight seasons. Caniglia and Benning will be inducted at the UNO Alumni Hall of Fame Banquet on Nov. 12.

An Omaha University graduate, Benning played football and wrestled at the school. He received his master's degree at OU in 1961 and became an assistant coach of athletics.

Benning left UNO in 1971 to take the principal's position at Central High School, and later became director of the Human-Community Relations department for the Omaha School District in 1976.

erback at the last second," he said.

Soucie's pass interception came with about 25 seconds to play in the first half, and he returned it 11 yards to the UNO 36. "Their quarterback was scrambling around and I think (UNO defensive tackle) Jerry McDonald tipped his pass," he said. "I was just in the right place at the right time."

A subsequent 30-yard pass from UNO quarterback Randy Naran to tight end Kevin Munro set up a 38-yard Mark Pettit field goal with two seconds left in the first half to bring the Mavs to within 21-10.

According to Soucie, the UNO defenders were surprised that North Dakota State didn't run a lot of option plays in the early part of the game. "Their quarterback was rolling out a lot more than we expected him to and it took us awhile to adjust to it," he said.

Soucie said the May defensive game plan was to force Nellermeoe to pitch the ball rather than allow him to run it himself.

The big difference between the win over Drake and the loss to North Dakota State was mistakes. "Last week Drake made the mistakes but this week we did," said Soucie. "Other than that, the two teams are about the same."

Reserve running back Bill Gillman helped spark the UNO resurgence in the second quarter by breaking loose on runs of 18 and seven yards as the Mavs drove to score their first touchdown late in the first half.

His 18-yard scamper on a draw play to the Bison 32-yard line totally fooled the visitors. "I think they were looking for us to pass and they left the middle wide open," Gillman said.

Gillman, like the other Mavs, was confident his team could rebound from the early 21-0 deficit. He also said the team was loose for the game, just as they were for Drake.

Offensive tackle Carroll Allbery said the Mavs didn't make any changes when they failed to make a single first down in the opening 22 minutes of the game. "We just tried to keep our composure because we were confident that we could move the ball against them," he said.

Although acknowledging that North Dakota State had a "good defensive line that was quick and swarming," Allbery didn't feel it was the toughest one the Mavs have encountered this year.

Naran breaks slump

Naran started the first six games and was benched last week, replaced by Mark Sanchez. Naran started against North Dakota State because of a leg injury to Sanchez.

"I had been struggling and was in a bit of a slump," Naran said. "I knew it, the coaches knew it, everyone knew it."

Naran was 15 of 28 passing for 210 yards and two interceptions.

"Our game plan, as always, was to have a balanced attack between running and passing," Naran said. "We knew North Dakota State was a tough team, and they don't make a lot of defensive mistakes."

It sometimes seems as if Naran is especially looking to pass to fellow Westside High grad Greg Havelka. They connected three times Saturday night for an average of 21 yards per reception.

But although Naran works extensively in the off-season with Havelka and some of the other Mav receivers, he says circumstances dictate who he throws to. "Timing, play selection and what the defense is willing to give determines what we do," Naran said.

Havelka adjusts

Havelka was a frequent passing target in the early games this season but seemed to be a forgotten man in recent weeks. But there's an explanation for that.

"I was a split end earlier but then the coaches switched me to flanker," Havelka said. "It took me awhile to adjust to the new position."

During the drive to the initial UNO score, Havelka hauled in passes of 25 and 18 yards. The 25-yarder was a spectacular grab in which the 5-8 receiver made a headlong dive along the left sideline.

Moments later he showed great concentration when he was sandwiched by two Bison defenders. He went up for a pass but held on to the ball for an 18-yard gain down to the North Dakota State 15-yard line.

Though trailing by 11 points at the half, Havelka said the Mavs "felt confident we could win the game because we knew we could play with them."

The loss brought an end to UNO playoff hopes, which had been rekindled with the win over Drake. What incentives remain now for the Mavs as they finish out a season in which all their primary aspirations have been dashed?

Greg Havelka: "We're going to shoot hard for a winning season because we don't feel like we're a losing team."

Randy Naran: "In these last three games we'll just go out and try to have some fun."

John Walker: "All we can try to do is win the rest of our games so we can at least finish with a winning record."

Jerry Skow: "We'll try to finish 6-5, and it's up to us seniors to leave something for the younger players to build upon for next year."
